REPUBLICAN newspapers are going to great trouble to state that General LONGSTREET will not go for HANCOCK. This is unkind in LONGSTREET after the manner in which HANCOCK went for LONGSTREET at Gettysburg.

THERE was a disgraceful scene at the funeral of ADELAIDE NELSON. An enormous assemblage caused great confusion round the grave. The circumstances arose from no disrespect for the deceased actress, but from the impossibility of the authorities to control the crowd.

DON CAMERON says that GARFIELD has put MURAT HALSTEAD of the Cincinnati Commercial, the bitterest anti-Grant man in the country, at the head of his Ohio forces, and that he intends to "let HALSTEAD and his gang work it out," and predicts that "GARFIELD is not safe in such hands even in his own State."

FROM the address of Supreme Chancellor WOODRUFF, of the Knights of Pythias, delivered at St. Louis yesterday, we learn that there was a decrease in membership during the year 1879 in the states of Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Maryland, Rhode Island, Georgia, Nevada, and Ontario of 2,699, while the other twenty-seven jurisdictions show an aggregate gain of 5,642, making a net gain for the year of 2,943. The amount paid for relief during the past two years by an average of 8,500 members divided among 1,400 lodges is $477,781. The receipts for the past two fiscal years ending July 31, 1880, have been $41,265. At present there is a balance in the treasury of $12,357, and the amount contributed to the yellow fever sufferers in 1878 was $8,833. The number of member in the order December 31, 1879, was 87,715; number of uniformed members about 2,150.

INDIANA Republicans seem fated to ill-luck with their candidates for Governor. In 1876 they had to take one off the track on account of supposed defects in his moral constitution, and replace him by another of more stalwart qualities. This is what Mr. Lincoln would have called swapping horses while crossing the stream. At any rate, it didn't seem to make any difference—he was beat all the same. This time they seem to have thought to make a sure thing of it, and somewhat doubtful of a steed fresh from the grass of native pastures, they made the selection from the party stables at Washington—a nice, trim little Arabian, that was supposed to have all the points worth having—and that reared, and charged, and pawed the ground and champed the bit, and tore around generally to the dismay of bystanders, (for there are always bystanders when such a horse as that is on exhibition.) But it's all no use—the horse can't run the race he was brought out to run. The very sight and name of the other horse seems to make him tremble in the flanks, and he goes to pot. We thought the Washington colt was cutting entirely too many capers at the start to hold out in the race. It reminds us of Henry VIII. when he saw "the Flanders mare," and with the clown in the circus we bet the mare'll whip.

But when I go to vote for a congressman I go as a voter of the United States, to vote for a United States officer.—Judge TAYLOR's speech at Fort Wayne, August 16th.

For partisan purposes Judge Taylor seems to be pleased with the idea that it is right to degrade himself as a citizen of Indiana.

He seems not to know that he has no rights of person or property which he can enforce within his own State, or within any other State, unless they are given by the common law, by State constitution or by State laws. There are no personal relations between the people of the United States, such as husband and wife, parent and child, guardian and ward, master and servant, debtor and creditor, nor any rights, or remedies affecting them, which exist by the constitution and laws of the United States. They are among the internal affairs of a State with which congress cannot interfere—and are State rights. The State also has the right of eminent domain over her own territory and if the United States government wants land in this city for public buildings, it can neither purchase nor exercise any authority over it unless by the consent of the legislature of the State. This right to exclude the United States from the ownership and exclusive jurisdiction over property within the State is a constitutional right—a State right. As a citizen of one State Judge TAYLOR can sue in another State and be sued in his own State, in the United States courts, but this is a remedial right only. The United States protect him, or its citizens, up on the high seas and in foreign countries—beyond this protection he is no man, no voter, a very nobody (not even a member of Congress) unless his own State, by her constitution and laws, make him somebody. His own State must teach him the difference between State rights and State sovereignty. Will Judge Taylor point to any law of the United States which makes him a voter? The 44th amendment to the constitution of the United States declares that citizens of the United States shall have in each State equal protection of the laws—and, that when the right to vote is denied, etc., certain consequences follow to the State; but what is the right to vote is nowhere determined by the United States constitution or laws. If voters are made by the constitution of the United States, or by any law of Congress, that law must be uniform throughout the United States. There cannot be one law for Indiana and another law for Ohio. Men, not citizens of the United States by any law, will vote in the State of Indiana for or against Judge Taylor as a candidate for Congress, and for presidential electors at the coming elections, who could not vote at all in the State of Ohio. If the man be a "voter of the United States" what permits him to vote in Indiana and denies to him the right to vote in Ohio? A man cannot vote in Ohio unless he be a citizen of the United States. Such is not the law in Indiana; a foreigner can vote here.

The constitution of Ohio declares that "every male citizen of the United States, twenty-one (21) years old, resident in the State one year, shall have the qualifications of an elector and be entitled to vote at all elections."

The constitution of Indiana declares "In all elections, every male citizen of the United States twenty-one years of age, resident of the State six months, and every male of foreign birth, twenty-one years of age, who shall have resided in the United States one year and in the State six months, and shall have declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States shall be entitled to vote. If a foreigner shall have declared his intention to become a citizen he can vote in Indiana, although he may never carry out his intention. Judge TAYLOR surely knows that it is the constitution of the State of Indiana and the State of Ohio which make these voters, and not the constitution of the United States or any law of Congress; else why is the elective franchise which is given to a man in one State, denied to him in another? A man who is not a citizen of the United States, and who could not vote for presidential electors in Ohio, can vote for them in Indiana; and his vote might determine the choice of electors and really make a president of the United States. The qualifications of voters, not being uniform throughout the United States, are not therefore determined by any law of Congress.

To vote for a member of Congress the voters in each State must have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State Legislature, and such qualifications are, and must be determined by the state only and not by Congress. How therefore does Judge TAYLOR become a voter of the United States? The Judge wants his mind enlarged so that he can understand if he ever gets to Congress, that it is Indiana he represents and not Vermont. And he must learn that it is one of the "rights of a State" to take the heads off of just such United States officers as he proposes to be in Congress.

Judge TAYLOR says a member of Congress is a United States officer.

No officer of the United States is ever elected by the people, from the highest executive officer to the lowest, and on from the highest judicial officer to the lowest. The legislative power of the United States can have no officers of the United States, except the Vice President, and his office is legislative in a specific and limited sense. Congress can make officers for their respective bodies, but they are only part of the machinery of legislation.

The people do not vote for their Senators, only for their representatives in Congress, and neither can be officers of the United States in any sense; for an officer in a free country never makes laws for his own government. Members of Congress are representatives of certain people of a State, and must be inhabitants of the State they in part represent, and the only power and duty they have is to make laws, and such is not the power of an officer.

If to be a candidate for congress induces Judge TAYLOR to believe he is to become an officer of the United States, the precise time of his induction into office must be when, and because public condemnation in his congressional district secures to him an executive appointment, as a reward for his partisan labors. Beyond this present field of battle, the judge, in a far-away look, sees a "United States officer" for whom he voted, as "a voter of the United States;"—and his name is Judge ROBERT S. TAYLOR; a good lawyer, a gentleman, but too full of the "United States" to be a safe representative of this 12th congressional district.

Danger of a Solid North, Backed by Federal Supervisors of Elections.

As we stated in these columns a few days ago, there is more danger to be apprehended from a solid North subject to the control of the Republican party, than is to be apprehended from a solid South under any control whatever, and we believe the people will show by their votes at the Presidential election in November, that they think and fear as we do on this subject. What is to prevent our government from becoming just such as that of Republican France under the Presidency of the third NAPOLEON, if like that we shall have elections under the sole supervision of the party interested in perpetuating itself? Under the supervision of Marshals appointed solely with reference to perpetuation of party ascendancy, it will be as easy to secure the requisite voting result to that end, as it was for NAPOLEON to command it by the aid of his Gens d'Arms detailed for the task of supervision. Better far leave the supervision where the framers of the Constitution designed it to be left, viz: Subject to state supervision. The task of supervision by the several states is too extended ever to be brought wholly under control of one political party. Even the Republican party, backed by a solid North, could hardly feel perfectly assured of its permanent hold on power unless in conjunction with it, it also had sole supervision of elections; and with that it might defy the will of the people with as perfect immunity as did the third NAPOLEON.

As in his case, nothing short of popular revolution and overthrow could produce a change of party and of administration. And we have no hesitation in the belief that this is the deliberate purpose for which the Republican project of supervision of elections by Marshals of their own appointment is intended.

Nor would the liberties of the country be safer in the hands of a solid South, backed by such right of sole supervision of elections as Republicans are now claiming for themselves. Any party, whether backed by a solid South or a solid North, would be found quite strong enough to keep itself in power, if it had in addition to such backing, the sole right of supervising elections. Nothing but revolution and overthrow could oust it. The real danger to be apprehended is from the success of the party that is clamoring for sole supervision of elections. We shall refer to this subject again, our purpose now being only to solicit for it the gravest thought by men of all parties and shades of political opinion.

POLITICAL POINTS.

A large and enthusiastic Democratic meeting was held at District No. 2, in Jefferson township, Whitley county, on Saturday evening last, which was ably addressed by M. V. B. Spencer, Esq., and Dr. S. C. Metcalf. At the close of the meeting the speakers were royally entertained by Mr. Henry Vogely, at his residence. The people of Whitley declare in no uncertain manner that Hon. Walpole G. Colerick will run ahead of his ticket in that bailiwick. It was almost impossible for the orators of the evening to return to Fort Wayne that night as their services were desired elsewhere in the good cause.

The same evening the enthusiastic Democracy of Oasian, Wells county, raised a pole one hundred and fifteen feet high. Many gentlemen in that section who have heretofore acted with the Republican party have changed front and are now laboring unceasingly for the perpetuation of the principles of the Democracy.

Pole-raising and speaking at Francis' Hall, in Wayne township, on Saturday evening next; also at New Haven, at both of which the people of the respective localities are earnestly requested to be present and participate.

The excursion to Detroit, Michigan, under the auspices of the Wayne street M. E. church, which leaves the north depot at 5:50 a. m., Thursday, August 26th, will be the finest of the season. Elegant coaches will be provided, and everything possible will be done for the comfort and happiness of the excursionists. Remember that the fare for the round trip is only $2.25, including a boat ride of twelve miles down the Detroit river to the White Sulphur Springs, and return. Tickets good for three days. On sale by Committee, and at County Clerk's office, and depot.

Hancock and Longstreet.

(Indianapolis Sentinel.)

The Republican organs, Republican conspirators, Republican orators, and the whole gang of Republican leaders, shout for Longstreet and denounce Hancock.

Longstreet were distinguished in the war of the rebellion. Longstreet fought through the war to destroy the union, Hancock to preserve the union.

Longstreet was a rebel, Hancock one of the bravest men that ever drew a sword for the cause of his country. It may be of service to note some of the more distinguished battles these generals were engaged in:

Hancock's Battles. Williamsburg, Frazier's Farm, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Wilderness, Cold Harbor, Petersburg.

It will be seen where these generals met and where they fought. Longstreet was a member of Lee's last council of war. He sheathed his sword only when defeat had overtaken him. He fought to the last. Hancock only sheathed his sword when victory was assured and peace reigned from the Potomac to the Rio Grande.

Now, then, look you, Americans: Republican managers are extolling Longstreet and denouncing Hancock with the vilest abuse that ever stained the lips of men.

Longstreet was among the first confederate generals to avail himself of the proffered amnesty. We do not blame nor condemn him for that. Hancock did not require amnesty, pardon, reinstatement as a citizen.

But Republican conspirators—the Blaines and the Logans—the morally and politically deformed partisan leaders of the Republican party—now open the flood-gates of falsehood and slander upon General Winfield Scott Hancock, while they extol James Longstreet, and lavish upon him lucrative and honorable offices—from surveyor of the port of New Orleans to his present high position of minister resident to Turkey at a salary of $7,500 a year in gold.

On the ten battle-fields named above, Hancock and Longstreet met face to face with their opposing legions—Hancock beneath the stars and stripes, Longstreet with the stars and bars floating above him; and now Republican conspirators ask soldiers to strike down Hancock while they shout for the elevation of Longstreet. How does it strike you, boys in blue? What do ye think of it, ye men who went forth to battle in the Union army? Are you ready to obey the leaders of the Republican party? No! by the sacred blood of your ghostly dead comrades, you will not.

If the Republican party desire to honor Longstreet, very well; but they cannot make the soldiers who were at the front join them to defeat Hancock.

The Best She Could Do.

(Detroit Free Press.)

A party of Detroiters were fishing for brook trout on the Boyne River, and camping out on its banks, ran out of supplies, and an envoy was sent to beg, buy or borrow something until an order sent to Traverse City could be filled.

After a walk of two miles he reached a log house in the woods. A woman, five children, three dogs and a family of tame coons occupied the one single room in the house.

The furniture was all home made, the table consisted entirely of tin dishes, and only one bed was visible. He stated his errand, and the woman replied:

"Flour! I reckon we ran out of flour yesterday, and we won't have any more till next week."

"Can you spare any coffee?" "I guess not. The last coffee we had run out on Christmas. If we get any next week I'll spare some."

"How about tea?" "Well, tea has been more purty skeered with us for the last two months, but Ben said he thought of gettin' some 'long this fall. If you are around here when our tea comes, we'll divide with you."

"You haven't any potatoes to spare, have you?" "Well, now, you ought to have been here last week for 'taters. I cooked the last Sunday. These 'ere dogs and children sate a heap by cold 'taters, and they go off like hot cakes. Ben is going to git some 'long about Saturday."

"Haven't you any provisions at all which you can spare?" asked the discouraged envoy.

"Well, now, I don't believe we have, but we are goin' to stock up 'long in the fall. I was telling Ben only last night that I'd got kinder tired of schroochin' along on Injun and 'lasses."

"I'll buy some of that if you can spare it, for we haven't a bite of anything in camp."

"No, I can't sell any. Fact is, we had the last for breakfast, and Ben won't get any more till Saturday night."

"I'm sorry," said the man, as he turned away.

"Yes, so'm I," she sighed in return. "I seed your party down thar in camp t'other day, and you look like honest folks. I'd be glad to spare you something, but I can't. If you mean to move your camp up here and enjoy our society and use our snudge to drive away skeeters we'll do our best to make it pleasant; but when you come down to fodder we hain't no whar." I was telling Ben only last night that we'd be lucky if we got those dogs and coons through another winter!"

John would not bend his veracity for a ton of fish.

The Gazette deliberately falsifies in its issue of this morning when it states that the banner presented to the Democratic First Voters' club last evening was bought and paid for by assessments levied on the members of the club. The banner was purchased by M. V. B. Spencer, esq., at his own individual expense, and by him presented to the club, as elsewhere noted. Mr. Spencer is a liberal-minded generous gentleman, and to him alone is the club indebted for its handsome present.

A PLEASANT OCCASION.

Democratic First Voters' Club.

At eight o'clock last evening a large number of the Democratic First Voters' Club assembled in the Circuit Court Room in regular meeting which was called to order by the President, Mr. Joseph F. Beegan. Occupying a prominent position was to be seen a handsome silk banner, on the obverse of which was a portrait of General Winfield Scott Hancock beneath the words in a semi-circle "Our First Vote!" On the reverse of the banner was to be seen a portrait of Hon. William H. English. After the meeting had been regularly organized Mr. M. V. B. Spencer, who had purchased the banner in Chicago, arose and formally presented it to the club. He said that the banner bore the portrait of a man who will be, is sure to be the next President of the United States, and then turning it around said that it also bore the portrait of a man who would be the next Vice-President of the United States. There was also to be seen on it, continued the speaker, the motto, "Our First Vote." It was right and proper that young men would determine what their political principles would be; that they would start right and continue right throughout their entire lives. He believed the principles of the Democratic party to be the true principles of government, and presenting the banner to the club he did so with the hope that every member of the club would vote for the entire Democratic ticket, not only for one man on the ticket but for every candidate, county, state and national, believing as he did that each man on the three tickets was an honest man and had a pure record. As he spoke Mr. Spencer held the banner in his hand, and his remarks were frequently greeted with great applause.

President Beegan, on behalf of the club, received the banner in a neat and pertinent speech, returning the thanks of the club to Mr. Spencer for his beautiful and elegant present, and expressing the sentiment of the members of the organization when he said that its vote would be cast solid for the candidates of the Democratic party and the principles that they represented.

Charles H. Worden, A. J. Moynihan, Thomas Keefe, James F. Kane, Will S. O'Rourke and Henry Monning were appointed a committee on finance.

The club then adjourned to the rooms of the Democratic central committee for drill, preparatory to acting as an escort to the speakers to-night. The members are requested to be promptly on hand at the same place this evening at seven o'clock.

Off to Rome City.

The names of the young gentlemen of the Hillsdale (Michigan) boat club who arrived in the city yesterday and were quartered at the Mayer House are E. T. Beckhardt, W. P. Branch, G. F. Elias, F. Conner, C. W. Ferris and F. Bradley. Last evening the Hillsdale boys, marshalled by Marshal Frank Falker, were interested spectators at the excellent entertainment given by Manager Morris at the Olympic Theatre. This morning they left for Rome City accompanied by the St. Joe club, of this city, a fair sprinkling of ladies and in large number of the sporting fraternity generally. The regatta promises to be one of unbounded enjoyment.
